

Advertising Age®

Search Advertising Age

Advanced Search

More from Advertising Age: AdCritic.com Madison-Vine AdAgeChina Sign up for E-mail Newsletters

HOME

Latest News
 MediaWorks
 Hispanic Marketing
 Digital
 American Demographics
 Data Center
 People & Players
 CMO Strategy
 Account Action

This Week's Issue
 Your Opinion

COLUMNS

Jonah Bloom
 Rance Crain
 Scott Donaton
 The Media Guy
 Teresa Iezzi
 Al Ries
 Randall Rothenberg

BLOGS & PODS

Bob Garfield
 TV Spots
 Why It Matters
 Video Index
 Small Agency Diary
 Out of Site

MEDIA WORKS NEWS

E-mail a Friend Order Reprints Print Page Comment

10 Magazine Covers We Loved

Book of Tens: Beautiful, Witty, Surprising

By Nat Lyles

Published: December 18, 2006

1. "New York"

The photo montage for New York's feature on prolonging youth well into adult life had us nervously examining our own lifestyle. As it turns out, we actually do know a surprising number of people who wear messenger bags because they proved their owner was still "alive."

2. "The Economist"

It may have been the last time anyone laughed when they saw Kim Jong-il, but The Economist gets props for a great joke about a terrible situation—North Korean missile tests. The American Society of Magazine Editors gave it third place in its cover-of-the-year competition.

3. "Time"

Not long after North Korea's missile test proved again that the U.S. can't do everything with a big stick, Time argued with this cover feature that the Bush administration's single-handed approach had effectively been stilled. ASME called it the best cover concept of 2006.

4. "Wired"

Midway through what would turn out to be the Year of Colbert, Stephen Colbert took a hacksaw to an iPod to illustrate the "How To" cover feature, which included "Be an Expert at Everything!" (by Stephen Colbert) and "How to Hack Your iPod." It looks so fun we still want to try it.

5. "Harper's Bazaar"

We hear you: It's been done, Britney Spears is no Demi Moore and lots of you gagged when you saw this one. Well, sorry, haters. When most covers are products of focus groups or online panels, God bless Harper's Bazaar for putting out something no one expected.

6. "Swindle"

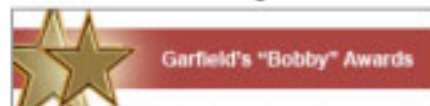

Here's the other way to use the pregnant-nude theme. Swindle, the Los Angeles-based pop-culture and lifestyle magazine, announced its feature on street artist Banksy to great effect with its own twist on the Demi cover. Speaking of choice cover quality, Swindle is available both hardbound and soft.

7. "The New Yorker"

Even those who don't remember Philippe Petit's 1974 high-wire walk between the towers of the World Trade Center feel this void. A second cover, behind the first, filled in the white space with the footprints

Best Commercial Acting Performance

Actors in Ads for Apple, Ace Hardware and Sprint Honored

SMALL AGENCY DIARY

Allen Iverson's Move and Understanding Brand You

How Reputation is All You Have in Business

Who delivers
360° customer coverage?

The Ad Age Group Custom Programs presents

Find out how the winners made mobile deliver ROI.

MORE

These media brands know how to surround-sound your customers.

MORE

MOST E-MAILED

1. 10 Viral Videos You Should Have Seen
2. Small B-to-B Brands Get Their 'TV Moment'
3. Dove Latest to Solicit Ads From Consumers
4. Time Inc.'s Holiday Surprise: Layoffs
5. Ford Readies \$80 Million Push for New SUV

THE POWER OF REACH, RELEVANCE AND RESULTS

Click here to learn more

Sprint
POWER UP
 Together with NEXTEL

RESOURCES